

ABSTRACT

A method of creating an interfaced based representation of an electronic design is provided. Rows and columns are added to tables. These rows and columns
5 represent signals and instances in the electronic design being represented by the description. The cells created by the table that results from the rows and column provide interconnect information.